MSNBC.com	News	www.msnbc.msn.com	MSNBC, the cable TV news channel operated by Microsoft and NBC has a rather good mobile web site. There is no dedicated URL for the mobile site as far as I know, but if you go to MSNBC.com with almost any mobile browser, the site's browser detection kicks in to serve mobile pages. It's a typical multi section news portal much in the style of CNN's and the BBC's mobile sites. Unlike those two which use in house reporters extensively, much of MSNBC's content is from the wire services or other publishers like Business Week, Forbes and the National Geographic.	Updated: 7:42 p.m. ET March 3, 2007 Mobile Click here! Top MSNBC Headlines Rob Carr / AP Bush visits Ala. school struck by tornado	Updated: 5:19 p.m. ET March 3, 2007 Mobile Click here! The Arts Stolen Rockwell found in Spielberg's collection 'Russian Schoolroom' taken in 1973; filmmaker unaware it had been stolen

Reuters	News	mobile.reuters.com	A well designed mobile site from the big international news service, Reuters. Many sections and features including sports, business, global stock quotes, technology and entertainment. Stories are full length. The site services customized content (WAP1 or WAP2, images resized to fit the screen) based on browser capabilities. Some pages are, however too big (over 6KB) for most WAP1 phones - many of which can't handle over 2 KB.
The Onion	News	mobile.theonion.com	The Onion is a national publication and website that offers award-winning news and views that readers can't get anywhere else. Every week, our attention grabbing headlines and photojournalism paint a unique picture of the world.
Time	News	mobile.time.com	TIME was the first newsweekly magazine in the US and before the rise of the web diminished its influence, being on the cover of TIME generated immediate nationwide celebrity or notoriety - the cover subjects weren't always the good guys. While not much attention is paid anymore to the weekly cover person, TIME's annual Person of the Year still generates considerable buzz. TIME.com has been on the web since 1998 and it's current web edition is both very complete and attractively designed with many news photos.
